Rabbi's Message

For those of you who did not hear it first hand on Erev Rosh Hashanah here is a little snippet of my talk. The entire talk, along with others I gave during the High Holidays are included on-line at bnai-abraham.org. Thanks to Brian Epstein for making this possible.

On Erev Rosh Hashanah, when we remember the speed of the creation of our world, and, in doing so, we understand fully how infinitely small we are in such an overwhelmingly, large universe. This universe, that one day long ago, we might even have been able to hold in our hands, seems so impossibly beyond the scope of human thinking.

During the High Holidays we are supposed to carry two pieces of paper in our pockets. On one is written, "I am but dust." On the other, "for me the world was created." We remember God forming Adam, the first man, from the dust in the world. And, we also remember God's breath nestled inside of our body, creating human beings in the image of our creator.

In truth, our actual birth and lives are not so different from that of the universe. I say this as an expectant dad, well versed on the many stages of life inside the womb. If you have not heard yet, Ashirah and I are pregnant and due in the beginning of February.

At home, Ashirah and I have many books describing pregnancy. How at one point, all of us in this room could fit in a single Hebrew letter. For a full fifteen seconds after conception, we are, literally, a one-celled organism. Then, over the course, of just a few weeks we begin to take shape as a human life. By the fifth week, we have the beginnings of a heart. Our central nervous system and muscle and bone formation are beginning to take shape. By the tenth week, the fetus now actually looks like a baby, more than an inch in size, and weighing .18 grams. As tiny as an olive, but with eyes, ears, nose, and even fingers.

While the most exponential changes occur in our first nine months in the womb, we never stop growing and changing until our deaths. The definition of life and the definition of the universe, is constant and continual growth.

No matter how old we are today, can we imagine our selves that small again?

No, we cannot. Just like we cannot imagine all the matter in the universe condensed to the way it was at creation.

However, by sitting in that moment - that very first moment – even for just tonight, we know without a doubt, that anything is possible.

We are no longer here with our wounds and regrets, but fresh, new again. Before we even begin the process of Teshuvah, repentance and personal reflection, we must remember that sacred moment of creation.

We sit in it, holding the fragile pre-universe, that Tohu Vavohu, the fifteen-seconds of our own one-celledness and we just enjoy. There is nothing to do or say, just to be. For a moment, forget about the pounding of our chests that we will do throughout the holiday, and remember only the pounding in our chests. That of our heart and lungs, all the things that happen without our even being aware of them.

Yes, we are here in the sanctuary of B'nai Abraham, but we are also here as a dot on the landscape of earth, in the galaxy of the Milky Way. "Vayihi Erev Vayihi Boker, Yom Echad" "It was evening, it was morning, Day one." The first day of the year 5768.

B'Shalom,
Rabbi Alex

Tot Shabbat

Tot Shabbat met in September to celebrate Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year. In addition to our potluck dinner and service, the children heard the story, "It's Shofar Time!" by Latifa Berry Kropf and iced their own cupcakes for dessert.

Future Tot Shabbat services will be October 12, from 6-7:30 when we learn about Noah's Ark, and November 2 when we learn about the Jewish calendar.

As this is a New Year, we are exploring new subjects and crafts. I would love to get some food crafts going this year and if anyone feels comfortable enough in the kitchen to lead such an activity, I am sure it would be fun. Please let me know if you have such an interest.

For more information about Tot Shabbat or to join our pot luck RSVP list call Sharon Dauber 291-9169 or email sdauber@comcast.net. Sharon Dauber

Thank you Karen Nissim for ordering the beautiful flower arrangements for the High Holidays.

MOVIE NIGHT!

Get ready to laugh out loud! On Monday, October 8th, at 7PM, we will watch the movie "Keeping Up With the Stein's". This hysterically funny movie about competitive Bar Mitzvahs, with an all-star cast, is one laugh after another. This event will be held at the Rutgers's EcoComplex at Columbus Road (right near the entrance to 295 exit 52), across from Liberty Lake. There's plenty of room to bring a friend or your favorite Bar or Bat Mitzvah student! (The movie is PG13 for brief nudity and "situations not appropriate for younger children") Hope to see you there!

Come to our "Jewelry & Judaica" party on Monday, November 12th. 7PM.

We hope you will enjoy this opportunity to visit with your friends, see a presentation on a large selection of beautiful jewelry, and have the opportunity to order these wonderful pieces for yourself or for holiday gifts. There will also be a terrific selection of Hanukah gift items and gift wrap to purchase. We would like to invite all temple members to join us, even if you are not a member of Sisterhood. On-site gift wrapping will be available for Hanukah items purchased that night!

Please note if you have keys to the temple:
Make sure the door is locked when you exit the building. It has been found to be unlocked on a few occasions
